Coblr Application Text Message Opt-In & Consent Description

This document explains how the Coblr SaaS application obtains customer consent to receive text message (SMS) notifications in two distinct workflows: mail-in service requests and in-store repair orders. In both cases, text messages are optional and are sent only after the customer has affirmatively opted in. Text messages sent under these workflows are limited to transactional notifications about the customer's repair order (e.g., order confirmation, status updates, completion notifications). The Coblr application manages opt-in mechanisms and is the sole message content creator.

1. Mail-In Service Request Workflow (Website)

Repair shops using the Coblr application embed Coblr's order-intake form widget on their website. Customers use this form to submit a repair request for a mail-in service.

Process:

- The intake form collects details about the item being repaired, the requested service, and the customer's contact information.
- As part of the form, customers are presented with an optional checkbox to opt in to receive text message notifications related to their order.
- The checkbox is not pre-selected and requires an affirmative action by the customer.
- If the customer checks the box and submits the form, Coblr records the customer's consent to receive text messages about order updates.
- If the customer does not opt in, Coblr records the customer's decision to opt-out of receiving text messages about order updates and the Coblr application disables text messaging that customer from the server side so it cannot be bypassed
- The consent message is generated by the Coblr app and displays the subscribers shop name based on the internal shop unique identifier.

Raw consent content:

I agree to receive text messages from ' + shopName + ' at the phone number provided above.

By checking this box, I consent to receive automated SMS text messages about my repair orders, including order confirmations, status updates, and pickup notifications. Message frequency varies by order activity. Message and data rates may apply. I can opt out at any time by replying "STOP" to the text message.

New Customers:

- If the customer is new, they are prompted to sign up during order creation.
- During sign-up, the customer provides their phone number and/or email address to receive order updates.
- When a phone number is entered, a text message consent checkbox is displayed.
- The customer must affirmatively select the checkbox to opt in to receive text message notifications.
- If they opt-out by leaving the checkbox unchecked, the Coblr application disables text messaging to that customer from the server side so it cannot be bypassed.
- Consent status is saved to the customer record in the Coblr database and is visible for future orders.
